The Crimean War Queen Victorias War With The Russian Tsars

The Crimean War was the period from 1854 to 1856, when the two major powers of the time, Britain and Russia, clashed over the future of the Crimean peninsula. The war was fought between Russia, Britain, France, Turkey and the Ottoman Empire against the Crimean, Bessarabian, Moldavian and Wallachian forces. The war began in the Crimean Peninsula and soon spread to the Mediterranean Sea, the Black Sea and the eastern Mediterranean. The war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Paris in 1856, which recognized the independence of the Crimean peninsula and marked the decline of Russia's power in Europe.
